History: All the original documents within the collection have their description followed by "Santa Bárbara Mission Archive-Library." The originals have been in California since they were written by the missionaries. Other copies were obtained chiefly in Mexico, the archive of their origin being noted, e.g., Archivo General de la Nación, Mexico City.

Scope & Content: These reports were made out usually on the last day of the year and were sent to the father president at his headquarters. These reports vary in extent from one to four pages and as a rule are 8 by 10 inches in size.

The annual reports give the statistics on baptisms, marriages, and deaths; the number of Native people living at a mission in a particular year; the numbers of livestock, including cattle, sheep, horses, mules; the number of fanegas sown and reaped of wheat, barley, corn, peas and beans; buildings erected or repaired; furnishings of church and sacristy received; furnishings of house and field acquired.

The biennial reports give a summary of baptism, marriages and deaths of Native and non-Native people at each mission, and the number of resident Christians. The main purpose of the biennial reports was to show the increase or decrease in population.

Arrangement: The documents are grouped in the order in which the missions occur along the Camino Real from San Diego in the south to San Francisco Solano at Sonoma in the north. Within each mission set, the reports are arranged chronologically, with the biennial report immediately following the annual report of the same year.
